Being a seasoned pilot, Bernie Caldwell knew a thing or two about technology. So when he was facing surgery after being diagnosed with prostate cancer, he began researching his options from his home in Oklahoma. Learning that great strides were being made through the use of robotics, Bernie decided to ask what made a robot at one hospital any better than a robot somewhere else. What he found was Vanderbilt’s Dr. Jay Smith, who performs a minimally invasive procedure proving that the difference in robots has nothing to do with technology. Just as every airplane is only as good as its pilot, every robot is only as good as the person at the controls.
Time is a very scary thing. Because we pay so much attention to it, and measure so much by it, its passing creates a sense of urgency. Here I am, faced with my second ‘President’s Corner’, already into my third month of an incredibly quick year as President. Happily, it gives me another opportunity to follow-up on the theme of “communication” I raised last time. Since that column, I’ve already heard from a number of constituents throughout Tennessee that may have contacted someone within the Academy for the first time. I’ve heard concerns from members about such things as the Maintenance of Certification for Family Physicians, electronic medical records, and the difficulty about being involved in the political process. Unfortunately, there are no easy or quick answers to any of these questions. One of the things that is important is hearing from you, so that I have a better chance to represent your interests at all the levels I’m privileged to serve.

So far, I’ve had an opportunity to talk to the medical students at Memphis and Vanderbilt. I’m thrilled by the enthusiasm I see in students throughout our state. The increased involvement of the Family Medicine Interest Groups over the past year, particularly in Central and West Tennessee bode well for our specialty. It is exciting, yet daunting, to try to talk with students and explain why being a family physician is so powerful and special. Particularly in these days of uncertainty about so many aspects of medicine, it can be an even harder sell. Trying to make sense of such things as The Future of Family Medicine is critical for students, but also for private physicians. Thanks to many of you who serve our academy as preceptors and role models, we are making progress!

The topic of the Future of Family Medicine Project is another one that merits attention this year. The Project is over. Now the fun begins! What do the reports mean? How do we interpret them practically for practicing physicians? How do we prioritize the suggestions for change? Most important, how do we each implement change designed to help us regain control of our practices? The answers depend upon the job we do as leaders of your academy in response to your identified needs. So keep talking! Ask us questions. Share your concerns and frustrations. Better yet, share your creative ideas and your joy of the practice of medicine. Therein lies the secret of our strength and success.

Thanks for traveling this path with me.

Cheers,

Reid Blackwelder, M.D., Kingsport
2005 President

President Bush wants important medical health records of patients to be in electronic format by 2010. Find out what QSource is doing to get your office ready for electronic health records (EHRs) and new software created to get your office and staff compliant.

EHR.
KLAS.
HL7.
ASP.

Are they words found in Alphabet Soup or clues to a crossword puzzle? Neither. It’s the next step in medicine, as healthcare providers get ready for implementation of electronic health records (EHRs); a goal outlined by President George W. Bush in his January 21, 2004 State of the Union Address. “By computerizing healthcare records, we can avoid dangerous medical mistakes, reduce costs and improve care,” Bush said.

Physicians today are challenged to provide better care for their patients while attempting to save time and money at the same time. EHRs enhance access to patient information, decision support, and reference data. EHRs can also decrease the likelihood of errors and improve patient-clinician communications. EHRs can be major tools in addressing quality of care and cost/time issues in clinical practice.

However, effective implementation takes more than just purchasing and installing an EHR. It takes time, money and careful planning that many practices cannot afford. This is where the QSource Doctor’s Office Quality Improvement Technology (DOQ-IT) pilot program, led by the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), can help.

DOQ-IT is designed to improve quality of care, patient safety and efficiency for services provided to Medicare beneficiaries by promoting the adoption of Electronic Medical Records (EMR)/EHRs and Information Technology (IT) in primary care physician offices.

The Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act of 2003 (H.R. 1-263) encourages the use of health information technology to better manage the clinical care of beneficiaries. There is great interest in integration of IT in healthcare systems by patients, payers and health policy leaders alike.

A recent Institute of Medicine (IOM) report “Fostering Rapid Advances in Health” called for significant reforms in the practice and organization of medicine. It recommended that the U.S. Department of Health & Human Services (DHHS) undertake a number of demonstration projects to stimulate innovation in the adoption of IT systems in healthcare. Despite these efforts, physician offices remain largely unengaged in terms of their adoption and use of e-health technologies.

Given that the bulk of patient care is provided in physician office settings, a lack of IT adoption precludes potentially significant improvements in quality and efficiency in the delivery of healthcare. Through its role as a major payer of healthcare services and sponsor of both the largest national quality improvement program in the nation and innovative disease management demonstrations, CMS is in a position to provide leadership in the area of IT integration in the outpatient environment.

In an effort to provide localized support, CMS is looking towards Quality Improvement Organizations (QIOs) to implement pilot projects in each state. The QSource pilot project will provide support to small and medium practices with one to nine physicians in implementing EHRs. QSource is not a vendor of EHR products and does not endorse any vendor. All services and materials from QSource are available free of charge.

QSource helps physicians and their staff identify which of the existing systems would best meet a practice’s needs. After identifying the needs, QSource staff will look at steps that may help with a successful integration of an EHR into an office’s structure.

Leaders of our Academy established the TAFP Foundation in 1989. Our AAFP had encouraged component state chapters to use this as an ancillary means for furthering the work of family medicine on the state level. The history of our own chapter Foundation reflects our desire to assist new Departments of Family Medicine recruit and retain leaders in medical education. The goal was ambitious and stood on its own merit. The Foundation's goal was to fund Chairs of Excellence for faculty similar to Chairs in other clinical departments. The initial idea of one endowed chair soon became two with the formation of a second state medical school. The Foundation leaders allowed funds to be earmarked for either school or both. The legacy has pure roots in our struggle for equal footing in academic centers. Where are we in 2005?

Endowed Chairs in Medicine require in excess of a million dollars to provide stipend significant enough to consider the position stable and independent from the prevailing winds of change in academia. Presuming interest on investment of over seven percent per year on one million, we would have only a half salary to be competitive in today’s market. Financially, we must come to terms with the reality that reaching levels necessary to fund a Chair at Memphis and one in Johnson City is a four million dollar endeavor. We are currently stalled at levels that do not even exceed twenty five thousand for either Chair when all funds are combined. Clearly this idea will need reexamination with reality.

The TAFP-Foundation deserves a Board that is committed not only to furthering the goals of Family Medicine in our state but to actively raise funds in an ongoing campaign to stimulate targeted programs that complement the mission of the TAFP.

Whose job is it? Much to the surprise of a few of our Board of Directors, the majority of the Board of our TAFP serves as the TAFP-Foundation Board. There is fading memory of these events among current members. Our Board is not recruited for their experience in managing a non-profit corporation under the IRS 501-C3 designation. My suspicion is that most of them are indifferent about the Foundation when those issues compete with the pressing business of the Academy. The TAFP-Foundation deserves a Board that is committed not only to furthering the goals of Family Medicine in our state but to actively raise funds in an ongoing campaign to stimulate targeted programs that complement the mission of the TAFP. The TAFP-Foundation should be a separate entity with sufficient crossover of key TAFP members to ensure dedication and accountability to the stated purpose.

Our TAFP-Foundation must learn from the wisdom and error of other state Academy Foundations. We must be focused on specific programs that distribute funds regularly to meet the IRS regulations for non-profit foundations. We must be lean and not hire personnel that exhaust the seed moneys donated. We must guard against adding another agenda for our already tasked Executive Director. Thus, the TAFP-Foundation Board must be active and self sustaining.

After all, the TAFP is our primary organization and the TAFP-Foundation only serves to complement the goals of its parent. The TAFP-Foundation Board must be about fund raising and be designed to incorporate broader membership than just TAFP members. These members can include corporate partners in delivery of health care, pharmaceutical interests, health systems, and academic interests.

This is an active agenda. An active Foundation Board is needed. The TAFP has the opportunity in the next few months to discuss and act to change the TAFP-Foundation. First the TAFP Board of Directors must decide if it wishes to remain as the Foundation Board. If so, then they must “fish or cut bait” as the needs of the Foundation have to be met. If not, then they must vote to abandon the current form of the Foundation and effect a restructuring. The latter would relieve them of that responsibility and allow an ad hoc task force to recommend a new structure. The future awaits our TAFP-Foundation. We should go forward courageously recognizing the efforts of those who had the wisdom to start our Foundation over a decade ago.
